

WORLD

We are making rather slow progress in negotiations for liberalization of services. We should be mindful of the fact that potential gains from successful liberalization of trade in services are huge – far more than those from comparable liberalization of goods. If we believe in development and creation of opportunities for